Job Title: Outreach Dev. Specialist  Department: Outreach  Campus: Chicago

Name: Mary Kelly

Q: What is the most important skill that one should bring to the position?

A: The ability to communicate well with prospective students as well as with NLU Faculty and Administration and Leaders in Schools Districts, Community Colleges, Businesses and Social Service Agencies. It is important that communication flows openly and clearly in both directions in that I need to listen for the ultimate educational needs and desires of those I am serving and that I can respond in a way that engages and educates.

Q: What is the one thing that has made you successful?

A: Certainly my passion for Higher Education – and for adult learners in particular. My enthusiasm for NLU from the perspective of a former student, a teacher and an Outreach specialist have also contributed to my success in making connections.

Q: What do you like the most about the position?

A: I like that I am able to represent the University as a whole – that I can share knowledge of programs from across all colleges and at the undergrad and graduate levels. I like that I am out in the city and surrounding areas meeting people from all walks of life and sharing with them the possibilities for their future and how NLU might be a part of that future.
